The Lithopolis Home-Going Association

The forming of such a society was first thought of about December last in conversation between Mr. Jesse Dum and J. E. Zangmaster. A meeting was talked of several times, but not until Monday evening, February 13th, 1905, did it materialize. Just fifteen were present that evening at Zangmaster Brothers office, corner Fourth and Mound Streets. Mr. J. E. Zangmaster was elected temporary chairman and the officers chosen are given on third page. Those present at the first meeting were George Hunter, S. W. Blackwood, Mark Dum, Jesse Dum, Carl S. Dum, Walter Stotz, Edwin S. Stotz, Chauncey Stevenson. Edwin, Frank and William Zangmaster, Coit Lauffer, O. E. Getty, William Stallsmith and William Sallee. Plans were talked over about the Home-Going and committees appointed to make such arrangements to go to our old home on June 22nd. Meetings have been held regularly every two weeks since, at Henry A. Mason's office and Red Men's Hall, at which place the ladies have always met with us. This society is a permanent organization and after the 22nd of June a regular hall will be rented and meetings be held for our own social benefit and welfare. Any one formerly living in Lithopolis, or whose parents lived there, may become a member of this great increasing body. With a vote of thanks to the different committees who have labored so earnestly for the success of the Home-Going and three cheers for good old Lithopolis, for 'Tis Home, Sweet Home, to us.

HISTORY OF LITHOPOLIS

— BY A. I. CRUMLEY —

Lithopolis was founded in 1814, by Frederick Baugher and was named Centerville, but there being another place by that name in Ohio, it was changed to that of the present.

Tradition says that Dr. Wm. M. Awl, a practicing physician of the new town, was the author. The name is formed from the Greek words "Lithos," stone or rocks, and "Polis," city, meaning stone city, from the stone deposits or strata in the vicinity, and as a matter of history, the stone for the first locks near here of the Ohio Canal were taken from Lithopolis quarries.

The founder was public spirited, donating the lot where present school house stands for school purposes, upon which a log school house was erected and remained until about 1848, the present Methodist church lot for church, and the Park was reserved for Court House and Market House, and evidently was a man of soul, aspiration and ambition.

The altitude is high, nearly 1000 feet above sea level. Malaria and tuberculosis are unknown, and the scenery from Baugher Hill is magnificent. The town was incorporated in 1832, the first mayor Davidson Miner. Of the chief magistrates Daniel Crumley, John Blackwood, C. L. Seeley and J. B. Kramer are perhaps best known. They were all very efficient in dispensing justice and punishment to the offender. The present incumbent is George H. Lehman, who presides over and carefully watches the welfare of the city.

In ante-bellum days Lithopolis was a flourishing place, containing at one time five dry goods stores, two tanneries, several shoe, tailor and wagon shops, a flour mill on the hill, just above the old still house, the motive power being a great wheel put in motion by oxen tramping. It was the dry goods emporium for a large region. Israel Gregg's store, the greatest in the country, was known and patronized from far and near. Lewis Huber kept store in the Leyn-decker building, owned a large farm, slaughtered hogs, did a pork packing business, retired in the early 50's. Afterward Brossman and Andrew built a store room on the lot where Noah Coffman's blacksmith shop stood, and for a number of years did a large business in dry goods. In recent years Kramer Bros. erected a store room and for a long time did the greatest general merchandise business in the country.

The writer remembers when three hotels flourished, the Elk Horn (now) built by Wm. Sorrells, first landlord Elias Perry, afterwards sheriff of Fairfield county; the Buckeye House by Col. W. W. Hite, a building as large as the Elk Horn, on the lot where J. B. Kramer's dwelling now stands, with a big fountain pump at the pavement on the corner next to park; and the Joy House, a large two story building, opposite the present hardware store.

Col. Hite was the first postmaster in the writer's recollection, kept the office in a corner of the bar room for many years. It was a small affair, there were no daily newspapers, prepayment of postage was optional, rate of postage to Columbus was 5 cents, to New York 10 cents, if not prepaid, the receiver at end of line if he wanted his letter paid for it.

Col. Hite and John Huffman alternated as P. M., one was Whig the other Democrat, and change of administration made no difference, nobody else wanted it.

John Huffman will be remembered as the all around sneak and Paul Pry of the town. He kept special notice of all the young folks, and after nightfall seemed to be omnipotent wherever young couples might be. He had the stealth of a cat. Lithopolis has never had his like since.

D. R. Rockey & Son, pump factory, Main St., Columbus, had its origin in Lithopolis. The shop burned down here. Mr. Rockey went to Columbus more than fifty years ago.

The older people will never forget the old stage coach days. Lithopolis was located on the main route from Columbus to Lancaster, and was the half-way place between those cities. A relay of horses was kept and the teams were always exchanged here. In ordinary travel one coach each way daily, extra occasions more coaches, meeting here for dinner, often twenty or more passengers, and the arrival of the stages was as exciting and great an event as that of the long trains at Union Depot now. It was a thrilling sight to us to see the stage horses come down the street at full gallop, and when Samuel Crim, proprietor, started his fast line and told the drivers "if they would furnish the whip crackers, he would find the horses," the problem of rapid transit was solved for that time. Jacob Parr's hotel was famous for its admirable cuisine, and travelers made an effort to reach here and partake of the many good things prepared by Mrs. Parr. Mr. Parr was a great horse buyer for eastern markets.

Lithopolis, from its location, was the rendezvous for the fun-loving fraternity of Columbus, Lancaster and Bloomfield, and devotees of the terpsichorean art found this a congenial place for hilarity, great public balls were given, and many tripped the light fantastic to the enlivening strains of Money Musk, Fisher's Hornpipe and Devil's Dream, rendered by that prince of fiddlers, Tall Hite. The old Lithopolis Band, organized in the 50's, under the leadership of Henry Jungkurth, was the pride of the community, considered the first brass band in the country and was in great demand.

The first High School was taught in 1848, the teacher being Dr. John Williams, a great scholar and noted educator. The Board of Education bought one acre of land from Col. Hite, where School Park now is, and erected a brick school building, the east end was reserved for high school and was built by public subscription. Dr. Williams had a great reputation and students came from a distance. The school was conducted under the old Akron School Law, specially enacted for that city, afterwards applied to other places, and is said to have been one of the first eight high schools in the state. It has always been kept up to the standard, has a regular course, with graduating exercises, Frank E. Wilson present superintendent.

Of the old physicians Dr. E. S. Miner was most noted among the older people, the greater part of his life spent here ministering to the wants and sufferings of the people. Dr. George E. Eels was a great physician, was appointed superintendent of the insane asylum, removed to Columbus, served his appointment, returned to Lithopolis and resumed his practice and died in 1867, but of the middle-aged and younger Dr. Steven Bennett was best known; he was a physician of exceptional ability, practicing his profession for many years, and was considered a household necessity and counsellor in distress in nearly every home in the country.

The first drug store was owned by Dr. Adel, where Oliver Cupp now lives.

Of the old ministers Rev. Samuel L. Wilson was best known, he officiated many years, was an old school Presbyterian of the strictest sort and a great friend to the High School.

Of the industrial professions the firm of Sayer, Oyler, Hunter & Scheffer was the oldest in term of years of continuous proprietary partnership, did an extensive business, and their name plate on any vehicle was recognized as a safe guarantee by the public.

Jacob Mason's pottery will not be forgotten, it was a treat to us to watch the different manifestations necessary to the building of a crock or jar. He found ready sale for his products. The first tin shop was owned by A. R. Willis. Wm. Jungkurth owned the first steam engine in the country and had the first steam saw mill.

Samuel Kramer was hatter, manufacturing silk or plug hats, soft fur and straw hats, and was the first public barber in town.

The first piano was owned by Conrad Seamon, was an object of curiosity, a crude affair compared with the excellent workmanship of today.

Wm. Sorrells was Indian trader and fur dealer, annually going with a party of men as far west as the Rocky Mountains (as perilous then as a trip to the Philippines now) in quest of furs, returning with cargoes of bear, deer, wild cat, fox and others. He built the old still house building for a store room and dressed his furs preparatory for the New York market. Israel Dum in after years used the same building for a distillery and made pure old rye whiskey, strictly for medicinal purposes.

Dave Reinhart kept the first restaurant in the building opposite the Elk Horn House, and sold the first oysters.

The Lithopolis Cemetery, on a commanding hill, with its stately evergreens, red sandy soil, well cared for by the board of trustees, is a most beautiful place and a fitting home for the dead.

Lithopolis of today, with its many fine shade trees and beautiful homes, is a pretty inland town. Its citizens are noted for their hospitality, strangers soon learn to love it, compares favorably with its neighbor villages, is well supplied with the different business concerns, the sanitation is perfect, the city government keeps the streets in good condition, the scenery or view in every direction is grand. It has three good church buildings, Methodist, Presbyterian and Lutheran, and the spiritual interests are strictly cared for and guarded by Revs. Priest, Welsh and Weber respectively.

Its proximity to the capital and all combined make it an ideal suburban home for city people, and as Prof. Wilson is now building his Gravity R. R., which we all hope may be the connecting link with the rest of mankind, after which the future greatness and grandeur of Lithopolis is forever assured.

DANIEL R. ROCKEY

Born Feb. 19, 1814.

Made his first pump 63 years ago in Lithopolis.

Any housekeeper who wants to cut her kitchen work in two—do away with drudgery—cannot afford to be without the only complete labor-saving device—

A Hoosier Kitchen Cabinet

It means more hours out of the kitchen—lighter, pleasanter work in the kitchen. The supplies are all in one place—no needless footsteps about a hot kitchen—everything at your fingers' ends.

It takes the place of a pantry—is far more convenient, because the supplies are all in one place. Come to our store and see them. We will lay them in your house as cheap as you can buy them direct. One visit to our store will free you from kitchen drudgery for all time.

JOHN F. STALLSMITH

From Columbus, Ohio, Post, July 15, 1888.

John F. Stallsmith, better known as "Jack," was born on Main Street in the city of Lancaster, Ohio, May 3rd, 1845, where he lived and went through the routine of school life, until at the age of fifteen with his parents he removed to Lithopolis.

When a little past sixteen he joined the regular army, enlisting as a drummer in Col. H. B. Carrington's 18th U. S. Infantry, and was discharged therefrom with honorable mention after a service of three years, March 8th, 1865, at Lookout Mountain, Tenn. In September, 1862, he, with his company, was captured by Bragg's forces at Mumfordsville Ky, and through a series of incidents was retained a week longer than his command by the rebel forces, and during this time was brought daily before the officers and questioned as to the strength, situation and numerical force of our army at Louisville and Cincinnati. The young Yank divined their object in so doing, and persistently placed the number at about double or treble what it was supposed to be. Gen. Polk (afterwards killed in sight of the once prisoner) declared that if all Yankees were as big liars as the one being interviewed he had no doubt Ananias and a corps of professors in the same art were drilling them every hour of the day.

Jack was appointed postmaster at Lithopolis under the Cleveland administration and secured for the patrons two daily mails and other conveniences not hitherto enjoyed.

He has been called upon to fill the offices of Clerk (two terms), Cemetery Trustee and Councilman, and as member of the Democratic County Committee several times. At this writing he is a member of the County Executive Committee of Erie County, as well as the Central Committee, to which office he has been elected many times in the Soldiers' Home precinct of that county. His health failing in 1893, he became a member of the State Soldiers' Home at Sandusky, where he expects to remain until the final roll-call.

Persons from this vicinity who contemplate a visit in the future to this beautiful home for the nation's defenders will find Jack quartered with the Drum Corps at their cottage, and he will gladly chaperone them to and through all places of interest at the Home and surrounding resorts.

In connection with the foregoing short personal history, the following is taken from the National Tribune and contributed by H. H. Vanhorn, ex-bandmaster of the 18th U. S. Infantry, now stationed in the far west. Mr. Vanhorn was on a visit to the State Soldiers' Home and says:

While attending the funeral here of a former comrade, I noticed the familiar form of one whom we thought had answered the last roll-call. After the services I grasped him by the hand. I refer to the former drummer boy of Company H, 2nd Bact., 18th U. S. Infantry, known by the rather euphonious and pugilistic nickname of "Yankee Sullivan." Johnny Stallsmith bore the distinction of rebelling against the whole rebel army at Mumfordsville, Ky., Sept. 16, 1862, in refusing to surrender a drum that was private property, and in violation of an agreement that all private property was to be respected, in the terms of surrender. The victors young "Yankee Sullivan" kicked the ear-torturing instrument beyond all redemption and right in the head, too—for which rebellious act he was marched back to the rebel General Polk's headquarters under guard and held for further orders. Capt. T. Teneyck, the company commander, passed word back through the parole lines verifying his drummer's assertions in regard to private ownership of the property in question, but it was either not conveyed to the proper officer or no attention paid to the message.

Some of the Things that have made
Lithopolis Famous.

Wm. S. Laney patented and manufactured the first force pump in 1871, and the double force, which you see used now everywhere, in 1875.

John Blackwood, Sr., manufacturer of farm implements, made the first hinge harrow in Ohio in 1850; received patent for first successful corn-planter; later invented the first gang-harrow.

The Leyendecker Free-stone Quarries. The finest building stone put on the market today, comes from these quarries.

Lithopolis, being 1000 feet above sea-level, makes its climate noted for its salubrious air.

The many fine springs of water with just enough iron make them alixitivical. Two or three of them are decidedly magnetic.

Far-famed for its many nurseries and small fruit culture.

Noted for the longevity of its inhabitants. For the last twenty years there has been no time when the village did not have a dozen septuagenarians.

In 1902 there were in the village and immediate vicinity, ten persons over eighty years of age.

Henry Zangmaster, Sr., invented the first spindle wagon.

RECOLLECTIONS OF LITHOPOLIS

By JOHN F. STALLSMITH

We moved here from Lancaster, Ohio, about April 1st, 1860, and went into the house now occupied by Charles Feistkorn, Sr. The following were engaged in business, as near as we can remember, although there were numerous changes in the after years:

THE PHYSICIANS WERE.—Dr. Miner, Dr. Bennett, Sr., and Dr. Eels.

MINISTERS.—Rev. Wood, Rev. Bateman and Rev. Eirich.

GENERAL STORES.—Brossman & Andrews and Gregg & Custer.

GROCERIES.—George W. Beck, Sr., Adam Horn and Uriah Glick.

TANNERY AND HARNESS.—Joseph Brown, the latter being conducted by father, Wm. Stallsmith.

PHOTOGRAPH GALLERY.—Andrew Fellers.

SHOEMAKERS.—Vinton Rummel and Wm. Edwards.

MARBLE WORKS.—J. W. Jungkurth, Sr.

EGG PACKERS AND PRODUCE.—Bradley & England.

STONE QUARRY.—J. W. Jungkurth & Sons.

TIN SHOP AND HARDWARE.—Jesse Bailey.

BUGGY WORKS.—Oyler & Hunter, Harry Newton.

HOTELS.—Israel Dum, Jacob Parr.

BROOM MANUFACTURER.—Samuel Kramer.

CARPET WEAVERS.—Mr. Pfinger and Mrs. Dudgeon.

GUNSMITH.—Conrad Seamon.

PRODUCE DEALER.—Mr. Beery.

BUTCHER.—Wm. Jungkurth.

PLASTERER.—Jacob Deisinger.

BRICKMASON.—Eli Strickler.

TAILORS.—Daniel Arnold, Harry Arnold, John Smith, Joseph Dagen.

WAGON MAKERS.—Henry Zangmaster, Sr., and Frederick Killets.

PAINTERS, ETC.—Tom E. Hite, Dan Shultz.

BLACKSMITHS.—Jacob Seltzer, Michael Kramer, G. W. Layman.

SAW MILL.—C. A. Stanton.

UNDERTAKER AND CABINET MAKER.—Wm. Homrighouse.

CARPENTER AND BUILDER.—Amos England and Charles Bower, Sr.

The Postmaster was Jeremiah Sohl, who was also book-keeper for Brossman & Andrews. He succeeded Col. Hite, but of him we have no recollection. Mr. Samuel Kramer was the successor to Mr. Sohl when he removed to Columbus. The Mayor was Frank Carpenter who also taught school in the old academy building on the hill, in the rear of where the present building now stands. The town clerk was Calvin Filler or Henry Brown, who were succeeded by Reuben Blackwood. The marshal was Wm. Jungkurth, and he had no trouble in keeping the boys straight, as the boys were all good in those days. John Morehart, Sr., and Daniel Crumley were the squires and possibly Samuel Thrush.

There were six places where liquor was sold over the counter, and we don't recall a single disturbance caused by this traffic in which the aid of officers of the law were required to demand peace.
